

A group of the world's foremost men on the occasion of the occupation of Metz by the allied armies. Gen. Pershing is third from the left, next to Marshal Foch. Then comes Marshal Petain and then Clemenceau and President Poincare, between whom may be distinguished the figure of Marshal Joffre.

French Official Photo

The U. S. S. Caldwell, in Queenstown harbor, offers an excellent illustration of the size of our latest destroyers. Navy men call them "baby battle cruisers."

U. S. Official Photo from Paul Thompson

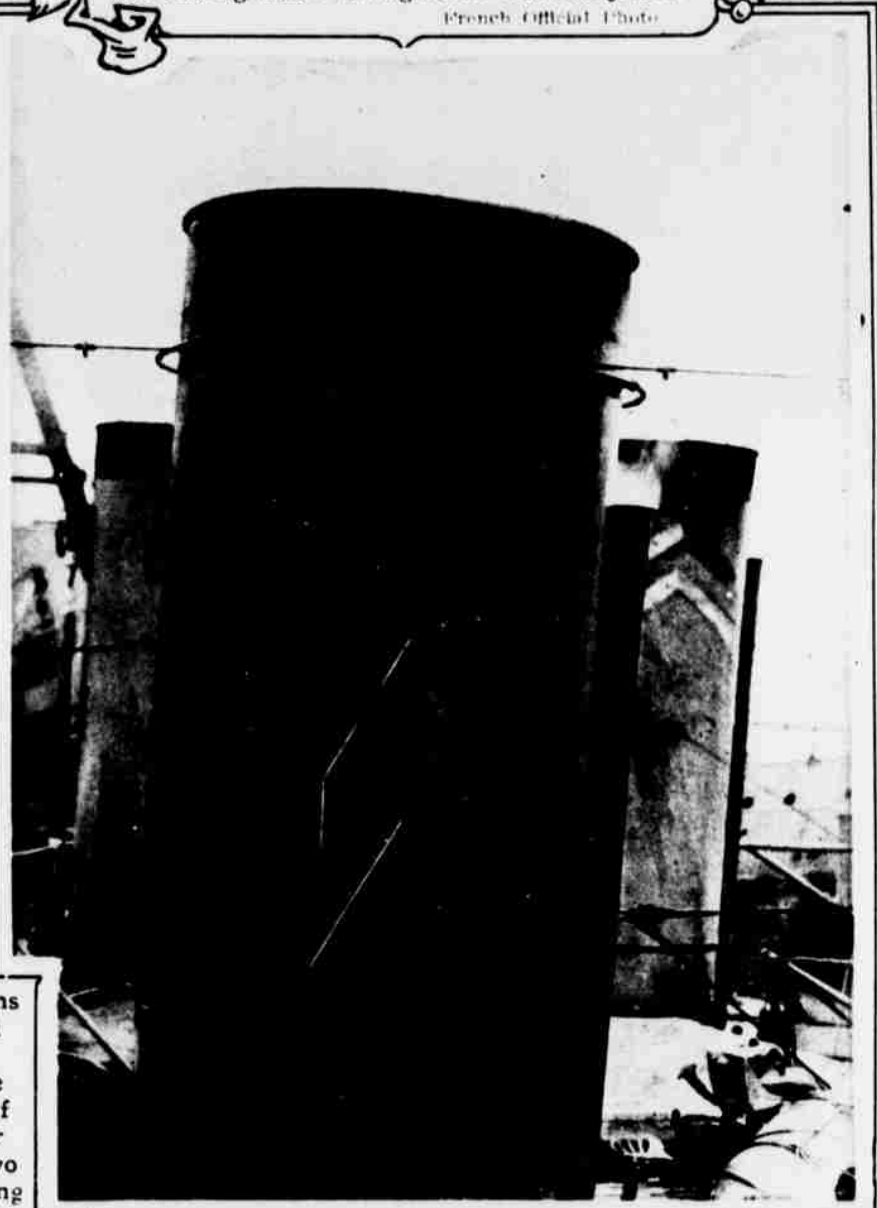

His signature on the President's check is good. As disbursing clerk at the White House, N. P. Webster's powers are unusual.

Copyright, Western Newspaper Union

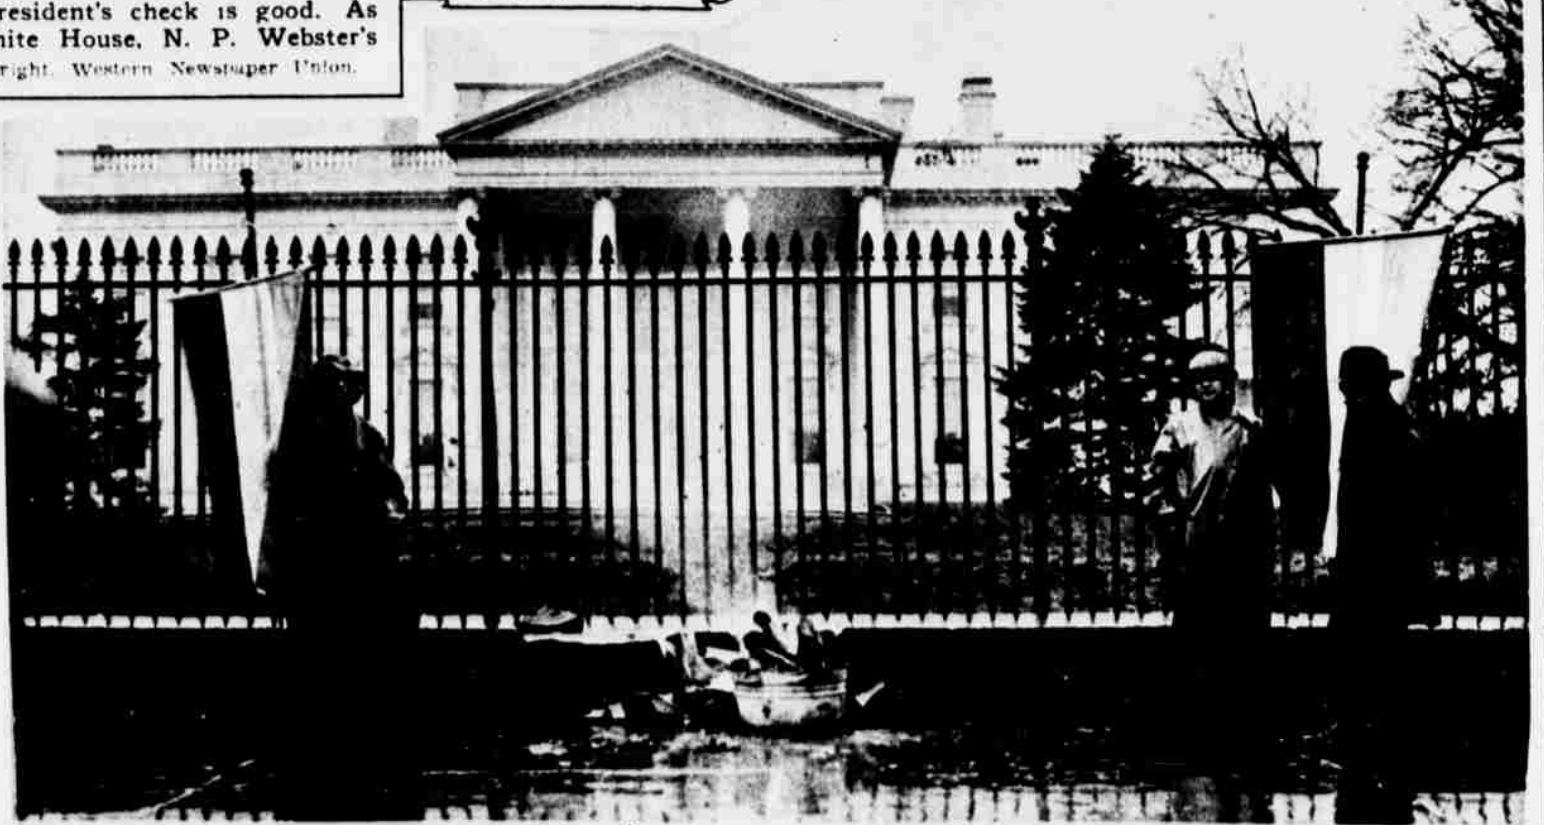

Service chevrons are the latest on warships. Here is the smokestack of the destroyer Cassin with two stripes denoting a year's duty abroad.

Copyright, International Photo

Joan of Arc's birthday was celebrated on January 6. The ceremonies in front of the maid's statue on Riverside Drive were especially elaborate. Miss Lillian Barrington, on horseback, represented the heroine of France.

Photo by Paul Thompson

The suffrage bonfire in front of the White House. It was started on New Year's Day, and the intention was to keep it going, using as fuel all of the President's speeches abroad in which he made reference to democracy.

Copyright, Harris & Ewing, from Paul Thompson